FULL CLASS RULES

The teacher or another person designated rolls a ten-sided die and reports the number to the whole class. Every person then needs to record that digit in one of the place value spots on the chart. Once a number has been written down it can not be changed. This process is repeated 5 more times until the chart for that round is filled in.

Then a place value die is rolled. What ever place value comes up on the die if a student has a number in that spot they have to sit down and are eliminated.

Then the next round starts with the remaining students until there is only one student remaining.

ALTERNATE RULES.

Ticket Play

Another way to play is to provide each player with 3 “tickets” and each time they need to round down they have to hand in a ticket. After they hand in their third ticket they are still in until they round down 1 more time, this is called being on the bus.

Point Play

To allow further participation you can play the game by awarding a point each time a player does not have to round down. This may be a more effective way to play in small groups.

No Place value die, No problem

If you do not have a place value die you can use a six-sided die in it's place using the following system.

 Ones	 Tens	 Hundreds
 Thousands	 Ten Thousands	 Hundred Thousands
